With a focus on encouraging economic development, providing tax relief and streamlining government, Gov. Pete Ricketts delivered his State of the State address Jan. 10.

Calling the state’s situation “strong and growing,” the governor pointed to several examples of the economy’s strength. The state has seen significant foreign and domestic investment, he said, and reached record employment last year. In addition, he said, Nebraska recently was ranked the fourth best state for business.

“Last year, Nebraska won the Governor’s Cup for most economic development projects per capita of any state in the country,” he said. “Nebraska had more qualified projects than North Dakota, South Dakota and Kansas combined.”

In spite of these developments, Ricketts said revenues continue to lag behind forecasts. As a result, he said, lawmakers need to once again balance the state’s budget without raising taxes.

The governor said his mid-biennium budget proposal will include across-the-board reductions of 2 percent in the current fiscal year and 4 percent in the next. However, the proposal also will include targeted investments to address specific problems, including a troubling increase in the number of children entering the state’s child welfare system.

“In this budget, I am recommending an additional $35 million to Child Welfare and Public Assistance for this year and next,” Ricketts said. “We must take care of our children.”

In addition, the governor said, Nebraska should focus on cutting and reforming taxes as a key to economic growth. The state has the 11th highest property taxes in the country, he said, and Nebraskans need and expect tax relief.

Ricketts said his tax proposal would restructure existing property tax credits as a refundable credit on state taxes to ensure that Nebraskans – rather than absentee landowners – benefit. The proposal also would permanently reduce the state’s individual and corporate income tax rates, he said, and provide $10 million over two years for workforce development.

“We can bring relief to Nebraska’s families and businesses and help continue to grow our state. It is critical that we get the job done on tax relief this session.”

The governor said Nebraska also will continue to streamline government services and reduce red tape in an effort to make it more effective and efficient. Doing so signals that the state is “open for business,” he said.

Ricketts noted that challenges remain, but said the state has a history of cooperating to overcome difficulties. He praised senators for working together in the previous session to address issues important to Nebraskans and encouraged them to continue to do so.

“For over 150 years, Nebraskans have always come together for a cause bigger than themselves. We will draw upon their strength this year to address the priorities of our people.”

Federal fund reporting requirement advanced

Senators advanced a bill from general file Jan. 8 that would require annual reporting of federal funds received by state agencies that participate in the state budgeting process.

LB611, introduced last session by Gering Sen. John Stinner, would require that reports be submitted to the state Department of Administrative Services (DAS) by Sept. 15 of each year that a budget request is due.

Stinner said that federal funds comprised approximately 30 percent of the state’s total budget in the last fiscal year. Requiring state agencies to provide more complete information regarding those funds would improve lawmakers’ ability to plan and prioritize, he said.

“The intent behind this legislation is to provide a reporting mechanism to the state to hedge against fiscal stress further down the road,” he said. “As legislators, it is imperative that we understand the complexities that often surround federal programs and foresee any unintended consequences.”

Under the bill, reports would include:

- the aggregate value of federal funds received in the previous fiscal year and the amount of those funds appropriated by the Legislature;
- the percentage of the agency’s total budget constituted by federal funds;
- any requirement for a state match or promises made by the entity on condition of receipt of federal funds;
- the statutory objective that is being met by receipt of federal funds;
- an operating plan in the event that federal funds are reduced between 10 and 25 percent from the previous year;
- a second operating plan if federal funds are reduced by more than 25 percent; and
- a detailed list of federal funds with a foreseeable end date.

An Appropriations Committee amendment, adopted 26-10, excluded the University of Nebraska and the state college system from the bill’s provisions. The amendment also clarified that the bill would require that plans be submitted to DAS only.

Stinner said the amendment would reduce the bill’s fiscal note by approximately $630,000, down to roughly $130,000 in the first fiscal year and $156,000 in the second.

The university and state colleges receive thousands of federal grants, he said, and much of the information outlined in the bill already is reported by those entities.

Bellevue Sen. Sue Crawford supported the bill and the amendment, saying it is important to see where Nebraska could be missing out on available federal funds. The state currently is 47th in per capita federal spending, she said.

“It is critical for us – for our planning – to make sure we understand the sources of [federal] funds and obligations of those funds,” Crawford said, adding that the state needs to be sure that it is getting the “most bang for our buck” when it comes to investments.

Columbus Sen. Paul Schumacher supported the bill’s provisions requiring state agency operational plans in the event of a loss of federal funds.

“The federal government has just
Omaha Sen. Ernie Chambers also opposed the bill, saying individuals who avail themselves of installment loan companies already have constrained options. The bill’s 29 percent interest rate would not be in the best interest of the public at large, he said.

“I could not, in good conscience, agree to a bill like this,” Chambers said, before offering a motion to indefinitely postpone LB384.

The motion was adopted on a 19-17 vote, ending consideration of the bill for the session. A simple majority of those voting was required.

Installment Loan Act.

Currently, a licensee may charge a borrower a maximum annual interest rate of 24 percent on the first $1,000 of an unpaid principal balance, and 21 percent on the remaining unpaid balance.

LB384, introduced by Omaha Sen. Brett Lindstrom, would raise the cap to a single rate of 29 percent annually.

Lindstrom said the interest rate cap has not been changed in state law since 1984 and the number of installment loan company locations in Nebraska has fallen from 39 in 2005 to 10 in 2016.

“State licensed and examined installment loan lenders with ‘brick and mortar’ locations are disappearing in the face of growth in online, out-of-state, unlicensed installment loan lenders,” he said, noting that online lenders can charge higher interest rates and do not have the same operating costs as businesses located in Nebraska.

Gothenburg Sen. Matt Williams said he supports the bill even though it allows for an “extremely high” interest rate, because installment loan companies provide an important option for borrowers who choose to utilize them.

“I’m pleased to support something that doesn’t take away a choice [from] an individual of where they would choose to borrow money,” he said.

Sen. Paul Schumacher of Columbus opposed the bill, calling the 29 percent interest rate that it would authorize “usury.” The spread between the prime interest rate and the maximum rate that installment companies may charge has doubled since the 1980s, he said.

“There’s been no demonstrable evidence that this extra ability to extract the market position that these people have is needed,” Schumacher said.

Omaha Sen. Ernie Chambers also opposed the bill, saying individuals who avail themselves of installment loan companies already have constrained options. The bill’s 29 percent interest rate would not be in the best interest of the public at large, he said.

The motion was adopted on a 19-17 vote, ending consideration of the bill for the session. A simple majority of those voting was required.

Installment loan interest rate increase stalls

Lawmakers voted to indefinitely postpone a bill Jan. 10 that would increase the interest rate that licensees may charge under the Nebraska Installment Loan Act.

Currently, a licensee may charge a borrower a maximum annual interest rate of 24 percent on the first $1,000 of an unpaid principal balance, and 21 percent on the remaining unpaid balance.

LB384, introduced by Omaha Sen. Brett Lindstrom, would raise the cap to a single rate of 29 percent annually.

we’ve signed,” Harr said.

A Judiciary Committee amendment, adopted 25-7, specified several items that would be exempt from the bill’s provisions.

Musical instruments containing ivory would be allowed if the ivory makes up no more than 20 percent of the instrument, it is an integral component of the instrument, it accounts for no more than 50 percent of the instrument’s value and the instrument was made before 1975. Antiques at least 100 years old also would be exempt under such conditions.

The bill would not apply to firearms, knives and their component parts. Additionally, any item that is acquired or distributed to an educational or scientific institution would be exempt.

Any item confiscated under LB39 that is not required as evidence in a criminal proceeding could be donated to an educational or scientific institution. If donation is not feasible, a judge could order that the ivory be destroyed or placed in storage.

Hastings Sen. Steve Halloran opposed the bill, saying the United States Fish and Wildlife Service has found no significant evidence of an illegal ivory trade in the U.S. The bill would do nothing to discourage illegal poaching, he said, but it would unfairly target Nebraskans.

“Every legitimate hunter abhors the act of poaching,” Halloran said. “This is only going to discourage legal trophy hunting and divert the fees from being taken and actively used to combat poaching.”

Imposing a strict ban on ivory sales and trade in the state could have the opposite effect of the bill’s intent, said Henderson Sen. Curt Friesen.

“From my perspective, as we try to make things stricter here and limit the availability of ivory ... you run into a situation where it’s seized and you’ve lowered the supply, so to speak, and create more of a demand for ivory,” he said.

Sen. Paul Schumacher of Columbus expressed concern that a person might buy something and not realize it contained illegal ivory. He introduced an amendment to the committee amendment to change the language to apply penalties only to those who “knowingly purchase” such items. The burden of proof then would be on the prosecutor to show that a person had intentionally purchased an item that would be banned by the bill.

The amendment was adopted 25-5.

The bill failed to advance on a 19-9 vote. Twenty-five votes were needed for advancement. LB39 remains on general file.

Handgun permit fee increase stalls

Lawmakers voted to indefinitely postpone a bill Jan. 9 that would increase the cost of handgun permits.

LB81, introduced by Bellevue Sen. Carol Blood, would increase the $5 permit fee to $25. Blood said the number of permit requests has increased as much as 400 percent in the last 10 years, but the counties’ processing fee has remained unchanged for 25 years.

“The crux of this issue is making sure counties have the resources they need to follow the laws [that the Legislature] has set forward,” she said. “This is not a bill taking aim at law-abiding gun owners or trying to place undue pressure on them.”

Sen. Burke Harr of Omaha supported the bill. He said the increased fee is reasonable and would not restrict any person’s access to owning a firearm.

“Just because you have a right, it doesn’t mean you don’t have to pay a fee, as long as it’s reasonable,” Harr said.

Lincoln Sen. Mike Hilgers, in opposition to the bill, said that increasing the permit fee could prevent some people from owning a firearm. LB81 would place an unreasonable burden on people who want to exercise their constitutionally protected rights, he said.

Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha disagreed, saying there is precedent for charging fees or taxes on the exercise of constitutional rights. The government can charge property taxes on a home even though the right to own a home is protected under the Constitution, he said.

Chambers said the bill was an example of a necessary fee, whose increase he would support.

Bayard Sen. Steve Erdman filed an amendment to require the state to pay all permit fees, including the increased fee proposed by the bill. He called LB81 an unfunded mandate that would place an undue burden on counties.

“If we’re going to require the county to carry this out, [the state] should pay for it,” Erdman said. “Let’s discontinue putting unfunded mandates on our counties and cities.”

The amendment failed on a 16-26 vote.

Omaha Sen. Justin Wayne said that extending the length of the permit would ease the financial strain of a fee increase. He introduced an amendment, adopted 36-10, that would extend the permit renewal period from every three years to every five years.

After several hours of debate, Sen. Tyson Larson of O’Neill introduced a motion to indefinitely postpone the bill. The motion was adopted on a 27-17 vote, ending consideration of the bill for the session.
Privacy restrictions for automatic license-plate readers advanced

A bill meant to protect the privacy of Nebraskans whose license plate numbers are recorded by some government-operated cameras advanced from general file Jan 10.

Introduced by Lincoln Sen. Matt Hansen, LB93 would restrict how law enforcement agencies and other government entities gather and share data from automatic license-plate readers, which are mobile or fixed cameras used in combination with computer algorithms to turn license plate images into computer-readable data.

Hansen said the systems could benefit law enforcement agencies by allowing them to scan large amounts of traffic but that they also could be used to amass data on citizens’ day-to-day movements. The Legislature should restrict the storage and use of that data before the technology is widely adopted by Nebraska law enforcement agencies, he said.

“Protecting the privacy rights of our citizens should be one of the government’s highest concerns,” Hansen said, “especially in today’s world of large scale personal data and personal data breaches such as those that occurred with Equifax and Target.”

The bill would allow government entities to use automatic license-plate readers only to identify vehicles that are associated with a missing person, registered to someone with an outstanding warrant, relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation or reported as stolen. Parking enforcement agencies could use the systems to identify vehicles with outstanding parking or traffic violations, enforce secured areas, assist weigh stations or collect tolls.

Senators voted 32-0 to adopt a Judiciary Committee amendment that would prevent agencies from storing the captured data—including photographs of license plates, GPS coordinates and time and date information—for more than 60 days unless it is used as evidence or if it is subject to a preservation request or the subject of a warrant, subpoena or court order.

Governmental entities or criminal defendants could request a court order for the disclosure of captured plate data, which would be granted if they can offer facts showing that there are reasonable grounds to believe the data is relevant to a criminal or civil action. Agencies using automatic license plate readers would be required to adopt and post a privacy policy and a policy governing use of the systems, and they would be required to report annually to the Nebraska Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice on their use.

LB93 advanced to select file on a 35-0 vote.

Greater bankruptcy exemptions advanced

Senators advanced a bill from general file Jan. 8 that would expand bankruptcy exemption provisions that were last modified 20 years ago.

Currently, a person may exempt up to $2,500 of personal property when filing for bankruptcy or resolving a creditor judgment. LB105, introduced by Bancroft Sen. Lydia Brasch, would increase that exemption to $5,000.

While bankruptcy should come with accountability, Brasch said, it should not mean destitution for individuals and families who still must support themselves.

“Debtors should be able to exempt at least as much personal property as they did in 1997,” she said. “The longer the Legislature goes without updating the exemptions, the less the debtors will be allowed to keep for essential needs because of inflation.”

Omaha Sen. Bob Krist supported the bill, saying that adjusting the exemption limits for inflation is common sense.

“This is something we can do to help people get back on their feet in a proper and fair way,” he said.

Senators advanced the bill to select file 41-0.

Bill would allow transport of firearms on campus for sport shooters

College students competing in additional shooting sports could lawfully transport their firearms on campus under a bill discussed by lawmakers Jan. 9 and 10.

Firearms currently are prohibited from the grounds and buildings on the state’s college and university campuses. School-sponsored rifle team members are exempt from this ban as long as their weapons are safely transported and stored.

LB321, introduced by Kearney Sen. John Lowe, would accommodate additional teams that compete in other shooting sports.
sports by removing “rifle” from the team description in state statute.

Lowe said colleges and universities throughout the state have shown increasing interest in offering more shooting sports teams, including trap shooting and skeet shooting.

“This would ensure that when a school decides to have a sports team that uses firearms other than a rifle, they’d be able to safely secure those weapons on campus,” he said.

Columbus Sen. Paul Schumacher filed an amendment to change the bill’s wording to cover “college or university firearm teams.” He said the change would address the original intent of LB321 while clarifying that a member of a university football team could not carry a firearm on campus, for example.

The amendment was adopted 40-1.

Competitive shooting teams help young people develop fundamental skills, said Gordon Sen. Tom Brewer in support of the bill.

“We have young men and women who already have very strict rules for transporting their weapons and their ability to perform is based on if they can safely transport their weapons,” he said. “We need to give them a method of moving a shotgun, pistol or [other firearm].”

Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha filed several motions to extend debate on the bill, calling it unnecessary and saying it would lead to a greater proliferation of weapons on college and university campuses.

“There should not be organizations sanctioned by a university where there can be drinking and firearms, readily available implements to harm other people,” he said.

After the debate spanned two days, lawmakers proceeded to the next bill on the agenda. LB321 remains on general file.

Lawmakers rejected a cloture motion Jan. 10 during first-round debate on a bill that would repeal the state’s motorcycle helmet requirement. A cloture motion is an attempt to cease debate and immediately vote on a bill.

Current state law requires motorcycle and moped riders to wear a protective helmet. LB368, introduced last session by Kearney Sen. John Lowe, instead would give riders 21 and older the option to wear no helmet but would require that eye protection be used. The bill also would prohibit children younger than six years of age from riding a motorcycle or moped.

Lowe said 31 states already have repealed laws requiring all motorcyclists to wear a protective helmet.

“It all starts with the freedom for adults to make their own choices and to decide what kind of risks they’re willing to accept for themselves,” he said.

Crete Sen. Laura Ebke also spoke in favor of the measure, saying the Legislature should not assume it always knows what is best for people.

“We have to start treating people like adults and like they’re smart enough to make decisions for themselves,” Ebke said. “You have the liberty to make mistakes and to try and make good decisions.”

Gothenburg Sen. Matt Williams disagreed with that assessment, saying legislators are elected to make public policy that is best for all Nebraskans.
Ultimately the social costs of traumatic motorcycle injuries outweighs the potential benefits that would be enjoyed by motorcyclists, he said.

"It is our job as senators to look at the information, pay attention and at the end of the day, do what we believe is in the best interest of the society we live in," he said. "It's our responsibility to make public policy for the 1.9 million [people] in the state, not just those who choose to ride motorcycles."

Any potential strain on state resources in the case of a traumatic motorcycle accident is a reasonable social cost to preserve citizens’ rights, said Sen. Dan Hughes of Venango.

"We have social costs for a lot of things in our state and communities," Hughes said. "If we want to avoid the social costs of things that harm us, we should probably also ban alcohol and tobacco."

Sen. Robert Hilkemann of Omaha filed several amendments in an attempt to delay debate on LB368. He said an American Journal of Surgery study found that motorcyclists not wearing a helmet were more likely to die at the scene of an accident, spend more time in the intensive care unit and pay higher medical costs.

Requiring motorcyclists to wear a helmet to prevent significant injuries is a small price to pay, Hilkemann said.

"I have a motorcycle license and I loved the thrill of riding [my motorcycle] when I had one," he said. "Wearing a helmet is one of the responsibilities we take when we own a motorcycle in the state of Nebraska."

After extended debate this week, Lowe offered a motion to invoke cloture on Jan. 10 and vote on the measure. The motion failed on a vote of 30-15. Thirty-three votes were needed.

A failed cloture motion results in debate on a proposal ceasing for the day. LB368 is unlikely to be placed on the agenda again this session. ■

MEET THE SENATOR

Thibodeau does her homework on new job

Not long after Omaha Sen. Theresa Thibodeau was appointed to the Nebraska Legislature last fall, Thibodeau’s daughter Eleanor, a fourth grader studying Nebraska history and government, asked her for help with a question on a homework assignment: What are the duties of a state senator?

Those are the duties Thibodeau threw herself into preparing for during the 75 days between her appointment by Gov. Pete Ricketts in October and the first day of the legislative session on Jan. 3. First she read the Legislature’s rules. Then she brushed up on the Nebraska Constitution. She met with local political leaders and constituents in her north-central Omaha district to ask how she could best represent them in Lincoln.

She also consulted her sister and best friend, Omaha City Councilwoman Aimee Melton. It was while fundraising and scheduling events for Melton’s campaign in 2013 that Thibodeau’s interest in politics grew. Thibodeau said Melton encouraged her to accept the governor’s appointment, and they speak often about how to balance their time between their families, businesses and duties as elected officials.

“Anytime I’m faced with a tough decision, I do ask her for input,” Thibodeau said. “We have great discussions.”

Next, Thibodeau dug into the state’s most recent budget to understand how it works. She said working with budgets is something she learned after opening the Primrose School of La Vista, a day care and preschool, in 2014.

“I have to make sure that I can balance my budget at the end of the year and that I am fiscally responsible and that I can go back to the families at my school and justify the reason for the money that we’re spending,” she said.

Also a board member of the La Vista Community Foundation and Big Brothers and Big Sisters of the Midlands, as well as a member of the Sarpy County and Greater Omaha chambers of commerce, the senator said her business and nonprofit experience will help her represent her constituents, many of whom are small business owners.

“Being a small business owner myself, I know firsthand the struggles that they go through in trying to not only get their business open but keeping it running,” she said.

Thibodeau and her husband, Joseph, a cardiologist, decided to start Primrose after she chose to stay at home following the birth of their second child. Thibodeau, who studied developmental psychology at the University of Nebraska at Omaha and spent eight years working in human resources and benefits consulting, wanted to ensure that area families had a day care option like Primrose, which emphasizes preparing kids for school and instilling a love for learning and good citizenship.

Thibodeau is picking up lessons after only a few days of participating in legislative debate. She said debate sometimes lasts longer than it needs to but that voting tends to happen quickly.

“If you’re not paying attention, you can miss a pretty important vote,” she said. “I definitely learned that you really need to focus and pay attention to what’s going on on the microphone and really study what you’re voting on—not only the night before, but days before—so that when you are on the floor you are ready to focus on the debate.”

She said other senators gave her some useful advice: Be your true self.

“Whether we agree or disagree, I will always be honest in my answers and sincere in my intentions,” Thibodeau said. “And I will always explain the ‘why’ behind my answers.”

Thibodeau spent a lot of time preparing for session, but she said she is looking forward to learning much more about how the Legislature works now that the process is underway.

“There’s still a big learning curve there,” she said.

Thibodeau knew she could answer the question about a senator’s duties back in October, but she encouraged Eleanor to do her own research. Since then, Thibodeau, Eleanor and her two other children, Joey and Anna, have had many discussions about her new role and what an honor it is to serve in the Legislature.

“Although it’s a lot of hard work, it’s giving back to the state, it’s giving back to the community—and that’s what we pride our family on doing,” Thibodeau said. “I think I’m teaching them a great lesson.”
