

Legalization of medical cannabis considered

Sen. Anna Wishart said there is broad support across the state, regardless of age or political affiliation, for legalized medical cannabis.

The Judiciary Committee heard testimony Jan. 25 on a bill that would approve certain forms of cannabis for medical use.

LB110, introduced by Lincoln Sen. Anna Wishart, would create a framework for legalizing medical cannabis use in Nebraska. Wishart introduced an amendment that, if adopted, would replace the original bill. As amended, it would create a new state regulatory agency—the Cannabis Enforcement Department—that would be tasked with reviewing and approving applications for medical cannabis use.

Wishart said a 2017 study shows that over 70 percent of Nebraskans support legalizing medical cannabis. While supporters span the political, age and geographic spectrums, she said, they all share a common desire to help those struggling with chronic illnesses who could be helped by medical cannabis.

At one time cannabis was used in 27 different legally available medicines in the U.S., Wishart said, before an outright prohibition movement began in the 1920s. While cocaine can legally

Public hearing, vote proposed on property tax hikes

Political subdivisions such as counties and schools would be required to hold a public hearing and vote before collecting additional property taxes generated by valuation increases under a bill heard Jan. 24 by the Revenue Committee.

Under LB103, introduced by Elkhorn Sen. Lou Ann Linehan, if the annual assessment of property within a political subdivision would result in an increase of total taxes levied, the political subdivision would be required to reduce its levy for the current tax year so that the amount of taxes raised is no more than in the previous year.

Sen. Lou Ann Linehan

The bill would apply to community colleges, counties, educational service units, learning communities, municipalities, natural resources districts, sanitary and improvement districts and school districts.

If a governing body decides that a levy increase and an additional property tax request are necessary, it would be required to hold a public hearing on the issue. After the hearing, it could raise the levy by passing a resolution or ordinance.

At least 30 days' notice of the hearing would be required, and notices would include the proposed tax rate and budget increase.

Linehan said the requirements would ensure that political subdivisions cannot collect more in property taxes from one year to the next without public input and action by governing boards.

"It does not keep any taxing entity from raising taxes or raising the levy back up," she said. "It's just [that] they have to vote to do it."

Testifying in support of the bill was Bruce Rieker, who spoke on behalf of seven agriculture organizations including the Nebraska Cattlemen, the Nebraska Corn Growers Association and the Nebraska Farm Bureau. Rieker said the bill would help provide relief to the state's agricultural producers, who he said pay the highest property taxes in the country.

The bill would bring more transparency and accountability to local tax collection while retaining the authority of elected boards to increase their property tax request, Rieker added.

Sarah Curry, policy director at the Platte Institute, also testified in support of the bill.

Nebraska has the seventh highest property taxes in the nation, she said, which a recent Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City report attributed in part to large valuation increases in both rural and urban areas of the state.

One of the most effective ways to substantially reduce property taxes is to limit local governments' property taxing authority, Curry added.

"While LB103 does not immediately reduce the amount of revenue collected at the local level," she said, "it does create an important limitation to prevent automatic tax increases without input from taxpayers."

Testifying in opposition to the bill was Kyle McGowan, speaking on behalf of several education organizations including the Nebraska Council of School Administrators, the Nebraska Association of School Boards and the Nebraska State Education Association.

He said school board budget processes already are transparent and that board members currently should be discussing their property tax request at annual budget hearings. The separate hearing required under LB103 would be redundant, McGowan said.

"Any school board that's having a budget hearing, their board members should be talking about the revenue versus the levy," he said. "If that's not taking place, I think they're not doing their job."

Lynn Rex, speaking on behalf of the League of Nebraska Municipalities, also testified in opposition to the bill. Political subdivisions are required to certify their annual property tax request by Sept. 20, Rex said, but certified property valuations usually are not available from county assessors until Aug. 20, making it impossible to give 30 days' notice for a public hearing on a levy increase.

Placing hearing notices in local newspapers, as the bill would require, would be prohibitively expensive for many of Nebraska's small communities, she added.

"It's not going to break North Platte, but there are villages out there," Rex said. "This ... would be a big issue for them."

The committee took no immediate action on the bill. ■

be prescribed for medical purposes today, cannabis cannot, she said.

“There is growing research and human experience across the world that proves its medical benefits,” Wishart said. “It would be unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious for the [federal] Drug Enforcement Agency to stand between sufferers and this substance.”

To qualify for a medical cannabis registration card under the bill, a person must receive written certification from a health care practitioner with whom they have an established, bonafide relationship. The certification would include a patient’s qualifying diagnosis, which could include:

- cancer;
- glaucoma;
- HIV or AIDS;
- seizures;
- severe and persistent muscle spasms;
- severe or chronic pain;
- Hepatitis C;
- Crohn’s disease or ulcerative colitis;
- opioid addiction;
- PTSD; and
- anxiety.

Registered medical cannabis users could purchase cannabis through regulated in-state dispensaries or home delivery from out-of-state suppliers. Patients would be limited to no more than three ounces of marijuana on their person, eight ounces at home and infused products with no more than 2,400 milligrams of THC.

LB110 would prohibit any registered user of medical cannabis from driving, operating a boat, train or aircraft, or undertaking any task that would be negligent or constitute malpractice while under the influence of cannabis. They also could not work on transportation property, equipment or facilities.

Medical cannabis would not be covered by the medical assistance program under the bill and private insurers would not be required to cover its costs. Any registered user who sells their medical cannabis would suffer immediate revocation of their registration card.

Representing Nebraska Families 4 Medical Cannabis, Shelley Gillen spoke in support of the bill, saying the state is forcing families of sick children to make incomprehensible decisions to either purchase cannabis illegally or sit by and watch their children suffer.

She said arguments that the state should wait for approval by the Federal Drug Administration—or that medical cannabis is a gateway drug—are nothing short of insulting.

“For over five years now my family has been in the trenches, begging our legislators to help our child,” Gillen said. “Why are we more concerned with protecting the potential [drug] abusers than those who are sick and suffering?”

Retired Marine Carl Munford also spoke in support of LB110. He said exposure to nerve gas while serving in the first Gulf War has led to PTSD and chronic pain. One trip to Colorado proved to him that medical cannabis could replace the 20 medications he currently takes, Munford said.

“Over half of us who fought in that war are disabled due to [nerve gas] exposure,” he said. “The only effective treatment for me has been medical marijuana. During the few weeks I was [in Colorado], it made the biggest difference in the world.”

Opposing the measure was Mary Hilton, who said her daughter continues to experience 30 to 50 seizures daily, despite medication. Medical cannabis is not the silver bullet desperate families are looking for, she said, adding that much more research is needed on the matter.

“[Physicians] haven’t been trained in marijuana issues in terms of chemical composition or how to counsel someone for use,” she said. “FDA approval would mean we could see all the side effects and know all the interactions with prescribed drugs.”

Col. John Bolduc, superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol, also opposed the bill. During the time he served in the California State Patrol, he said legalized medical cannabis was diverted to an illegal black market, exacerbating public safety problems.

“The demand for high-grade marijuana, edibles and vape cartridges is extremely high,” Bolduc said. “I fear Nebraska will become a source state rather than just a destination state.”

John Massey, a pain physician testifying on behalf of the Nebraska Medical Association, provided neutral testimony. Massey said the NMA could support a more narrowly-tailored bill that better fits the most recent scientific evidence.

Data shows that medical marijuana can be beneficial for a narrow set of disorders including muscle spasms related to multiple sclerosis, he said, but cannabis often worsens depression, anxiety and PTSD.

“It’s pretty clear that a lot of the information that comes forward and the data and so forth—that the people who bring it forward start with their opinion and then they find their data to support that, and I think that’s a problem in this set of circumstances,” Massey said.

The committee took no immediate action on the bill. ■

MEET THE SENATOR

Moser strikes the right note at the Capitol

Sometimes it can get a little loud at Sen. Mike Moser's place of business, but that's part of the deal. Moser, the former mayor of Columbus, has owned Columbus Music Company with his wife, Jan, for the past 42 years. The store has around 150 guitars in stock, and plenty of amps to go with them.

Moser always had a love of music, and still does, and was happy to leave his job selling appliances to take over the music store.

"The opportunity to call my own shots and run my own organization was too tempting to pass up," he said.

He had the drive and a plan, but what he didn't have in 1977 was cash. The previous owner of the store was ready to retire, and knowing that such an opportunity may not come around again, the Mosers decided to sell their home and move into an apartment.

"We'd just built a house, and we needed the equity to get the business loan," he said.

It was a gamble well worth taking. The store is still going strong four decades later, even in an era when online purchases have challenged many brick-and-mortar retailers.

"A lot of people buying a guitar like to have it in their hands," Moser said.

So, too, does Moser. His favorite is a 1982 Fender Stratocaster that he uses on stage with Cruisin'—a four-piece band that plays about a half-dozen gigs a year. They cover Elvis, the Everly Brothers, some older country and a variety of other music.

"I like songs with harmony and pleasant lyrics," Moser said. "I like the variety of being able to play different genres."

Moser addressed a variety of infrastructure issues during his 12 years as Columbus' mayor. During his administration, the city built one viaduct and approved construction of a second over a mainline railroad track, expanded the water treatment plant and completed an arterial street on the city's north side.

"We tackled a lot of long-festering problems," he said.

He's hoping to bring that problem-solving ability to the Capitol.

Moser succeeds Sen. Paul Schumacher, who served District 22 for the past eight years. Schumacher supported Moser's candidacy, but their relationship predates politics. The two were on the debate team at Platte Junior College, now Central Community College, in Columbus and were part of a four-person squad that competed around the Midwest.

"We'd be gone 15 weekends a year. It was a lot of fun," Moser said.

That's a skillset that no doubt will serve the new senator well, but on one issue there's no debating Moser: anyone, regardless of talent and experience, can pick up a guitar.

"I think anybody can play well enough to have fun," Moser said. ■

Real estate fee waiver advanced

Active duty military members and their spouses would not have to pay a fee to obtain a real estate license in Nebraska under a bill advanced from general file Jan. 25.

LB12, introduced by Bellevue Sen. Carol Blood, would waive the $80 real estate license fee if a military member or their spouse has a valid real estate license from another state or regulatory jurisdiction.

Sen. Carol Blood

The bill was heard by the Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee Jan. 22 and advanced to the floor on an 8-0 vote.

Blood said the proposal would remove unnecessary licensure barriers.

“Up to 90 percent of military spouses are either unemployed or underemployed, and that creates multiple problems,” Blood said. “That means our state is not collecting taxes on those individuals, those families have less disposable income to spend in our state and when a serviceman, or woman, is ready to retire and they have an unhappy spouse, they may not stay here in Nebraska because the spouse is unable to find appropriate employment.”

Sen. Sue Crawford of Bellevue spoke in favor of the bill, saying it would help military families that are often on the move.

“This is an important step to take to support our military families,” Crawford said.

Senators voted 43-0 to advance the bill to select file.

EDUCATION

Display of national motto in schools proposed

Nebraska schools would be required to display the national motto in each school building under a bill considered by the Education Committee Jan. 22.

Introduced by Bayard Sen. Steve Erdman, LB73 would require school boards to display the phrase “In God We Trust” in English in each classroom or other prominent place so that every student could see and read it each school day.

Sen. Steve Erdman

The bill would authorize schools to accept contributions to pay for the displays. It also would require the state attorney general to intervene on behalf of a school or other defendant if the bill’s provisions are challenged in court.

Erdman brought an amendment to the hearing that would eliminate that requirement and instead would authorize school districts to request that the attorney general represent them in any lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the displays.

Erdman said that 87 of the state’s 93 county courthouses display or plan to display the phrase, which was adopted as the national motto by a joint resolution of Congress in 1956 and reaffirmed most recently in 2011. LB73 would extend that display to public school buildings, he said, and is not intended to launch a debate about religion or the separation of church and state.

“The courts have ruled on several occasions ... that this is not a religious statement,” Erdman said. “This is not a statement forming a national religion—this is the national motto.”

Zachary Wahab Cheek, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln student, testified in support of the bill, saying that requiring schools to display the phrase would not violate the separation of church and state because Congress adopted it as the national motto.

“I don’t see any legal reasoning against this,” Wahab Cheek said. “I don’t see why this is not compliant with the federal government’s acts.”

Testifying in opposition to the bill was Gwendolen Hines of the Unitarian Church of Lincoln. She said the state should not indoctrinate students with belief in any particular god.

“Children should not be daily exposed to and expected to hold sacred the belief that the Christian God affects our daily lives,” Hines said. “Children should be allowed to make up their own minds about religion and God, and this decision should not be swayed by messages they receive at school.”

Marrienne Williams of Lincoln also testified in opposition, saying that the bill is part of a larger effort to instill Christianity in the state’s public schools. She said the U.S. Supreme Court has not ruled on the motto’s religious significance, meaning that its display in public buildings is not immune to future court challenges.

“‘In God We Trust’ is not a positive message for our schools, as it’s divisive and excludes all those that believe in no God at all,” Williams said.

Colby Coash, speaking on behalf of the Nebraska Association of School Boards, also testified in opposition to the bill. He said it does not provide school boards with practical details such as the number, size or location of the required displays.

Some schools may not be able to raise the needed funds through contributions, Coash added, resulting in an unfunded mandate on public schools.

“There are probably some school boards across the state who would like to do this,” he said. “But as an organization, we feel that that decision should be left to those public school boards.”

The committee took no immediate action on LB73.

Bill would allow certain treatment centers to remain open

Alcohol treatment facilities that use locked rooms would be allowed to remain in business under a bill considered Jan. 24 by the Health and Human Services Committee.

Sen. Anna Wishart of Lincoln introduced LB200 after the state Department of Health and Human Services considered revoking the operating license of The Bridge Behavioral Health facility in Lincoln. Wishart said a new interpretation of state law threatened The Bridge because it locks clients into rooms when they are admitted into civil protective custody.

Sen. Anna Wishart

The Bridge currently is operating under a temporary license.

“This legislation, if enacted, would assure The Bridge and similar facilities would maintain their license moving forward,” Wishart said.

The Bridge’s executive director, Tammy Stevenson, spoke in favor of the bill. Stevenson said her facility admits about 3,600 people a year, all of whom are intoxicated and deemed by police to be dangerous. Removing locked rooms would reduce the number of people The Bridge could admit, Stevenson said.

Forty percent of those admitted last year had a blood-alcohol level of 0.25 or higher, she said. By law, police cannot house someone with a blood-alcohol level higher than 0.25, she said, and instead must take that person to an emergency room.

“Our medically supervised program provides an alternative to jail,” Stevenson said. “We are caring for individuals who are acutely intoxicated and whose behavior is often unpredictable and hostile.”

Lincoln Police Chief Jeff Bliemeister also spoke in favor of the bill. He said taking intoxicated and dangerous people to The Bridge reduces the chances that they will hurt themselves or someone else.

“It reduces bookings into the Lancaster County Jail and it minimizes stress on emergency rooms,” he said.

Bliemeister said there were 75 assaults at The Bridge in the past 10 years, but that the number of assaults would be much higher without the use of locked rooms.

No one spoke in opposition to the bill, on which the committee took no immediate action.

Standards sought for surgical technicians

The Health and Human Services Committee heard testimony Jan. 23 on a bill that would establish a registry and a minimum standard of competence for surgical technicians.

Sen. Mark Kolterman of Seward said he introduced LB205 because surgical technicians are the only members of a surgical team without a certification of their competency. Kolterman said he found that “unnerving.”

Sen. Mark Kolterman

Surgical technicians perform a variety of duties, including sterilizing equipment, preparing operating rooms and passing instruments to doctors during surgery. There are about 800 surgical technicians in Nebraska, Kolterman said.

“I believe there is a specific and significant need for surgical technologists to be regulated by the state for the safety of our citizens,” he said.

Beginning in 2020, the bill would require that surgical technicians:

- be at least 19 years old;
- have a high school or equivalent diploma; and
- be of good moral character.

A surgical technician also would be required to document any felony or misdemeanor convictions when applying to the registry.

Casey Glassburner, president of the Nebraska State Assembly of the Association of Surgical Technologists, spoke in favor of the bill. Unqualified technologists can harm patients, she said, and those who have done so can move from job to job without being tracked.

“There have been instances in other states, specifically Colorado, where there have been surgical technologists that have performed actions potentially harmful to patients and they have moved between facilities,” Glassburner said.

Glassburner, who has been a surgical technician since 2005, said the estimated $50 annual fee would not be a barrier for technicians to enter the field. Fifteen states have such a registry administered by a board of medicine or a board of health, she said.

Crystal Livingston, an administrator at Doctors Outpatient Surgery Center in Lincoln, also spoke in favor of LB205. Livingston said that when hiring staff, she's able to perform professional background checks on all medical professionals except for surgical technicians.

Most previous employers will not provide an evaluation of an employee's performance, she said, leaving her unaware if an applicant previously had been fired for misconduct or incompetence.

Maggie Summerfelt, testifying in opposition, said she was unaware of any incidents in Nebraska in which a surgical technician had harmed a patient. Summerfelt, an administrator at Advanced Surgery Center in Omaha, said the bill would make it more difficult to become a surgical technician, a profession that already has low numbers.

"It's not about safety," she said. "I asked my [surgical] techs, and they're all against it."

Tiffany Weeks also opposed the bill. Weeks said she's been looking to hire a surgical technician at Urology Surgical Center in Lincoln since December but has received less than five qualified applications. She added that when a surgical technician isn't available, a nurse is called in, taking him or her away from other duties.

The committee took no immediate action on the bill.

JUDICIARY

Study of issues facing Native American women proposed

The Judiciary Committee heard testimony Jan. 24 on a bill that seeks to increase investigative resources dedicated to the state's Native American community.

Native American women go missing at a higher rate nationally than any other demographic, according to Gordon Sen. Tom Brewer, who sponsored LB154.

As introduced, the bill would direct the Nebraska State Patrol to conduct a study focusing on the scope of the problem, identifying barriers and creating partnerships to increase the reporting and investigation of missing Native American women.

Brewer said Native American women are in a unique position because often there is little to no coordination between tribal, county and state law enforcement.

"This failure to communicate between these agencies has left a 'no man's land' where people fall through the cracks and there's no ability to track the numbers," he said.

An amendment to the bill proposed by Brewer would expand the study to include missing Native American children.

The study would be conducted in conjunction with the state Commission on Indian Affairs, tribal and local law enforcement, federally-recognized tribes and urban Indian organizations. The Nebraska State Patrol would be required to submit a final report of its findings to the Executive Board of the Legislature by June 1, 2020.

April Satchell of Lincoln spoke in support of the bill. She said the 2013 Violence Against Women Act gave tribal police criminal jurisdiction over non-indigenous people for crimes committed on tribal land. However, she said, this provision only applies if that perpetrator remains on tribal land, which rarely happens.

"A non-Native man can rape us, murder us, and as long as we don't know who that person is, the law right now does not protect us," Satchell said. "Why aren't we given the same rights? Why am I standing before this committee and asking for this protection when I'm an American?"

Also speaking in support of the bill was Renee Sans Souci, a member of the Omaha tribe of Nebraska. She said there is an urgent need to gather data and develop a system that is coordinated between federal, state, tribal and urban organizations.

"I maintain a hypervigilance over my children and teach them how to protect themselves in any situation," she said. "I'm sure I'm not the only native mother who does this. It is exhausting."

Representing the Nebraska Commission on Indian Affairs, Scott Shaffer said the state is in nothing short of a "data crisis."

"The issue of missing Native American women and children has long been perceived as a serious problem, but in far too many instances the information has been anecdotal," he said. "In short, it's hard to fix a problem if you don't have an adequate understanding of the problem."

No one testified in opposition to the bill and the committee took no immediate action on it.

NEBRASKA RETIREMENT SYSTEMS

Retirement plan revisions considered

The Nebraska Retirement Systems Committee heard testimony Jan. 22 on a bill that would make a number of governance and administrative changes to the Public Employees Retirement Board (PERB), Nebraska Public Employees Retirement System (NPERS), Nebraska Investment Council, Class V School Employees Retirement Plan and the Class V plan's board of trustees.

Introduced by Seward Sen. Mark Kolterman, LB33 would increase from one to two the number of three-year extensions on actuarial contracts that the PERB may issue. It also would exempt legal compliance audit contracts from bidding requirements.

Kolterman said the exemption would be consistent with all other state agencies that are allowed to exempt legal service contracts from bidding requirements.

Among other technical changes, the bill would increase the per diem for PERB members from $50 to $75. It also would change the date for presentation of the NPERS and Nebraska Investment Council annual reports to the committee from March 31 to April 10, beginning in 2020.

"The additional time ensures that the Nebraska Investment Council will have adequate time to receive the calendar year investment return data so this information can be included in the annual reports," Kolterman said.

Michael Walden-Newman, state investment officer for the Nebraska Investment Council, testified in support of extending the annual report deadline. The council has added internal audit procedures in recent years that make it difficult to meet existing deadlines, he said.

"This will buy us a couple of [additional] weeks to get that done," Walden-Newman said.

NPERS director Randy Gerke spoke in support of raising the PERB per diem to match that of the Nebraska Investment Council. The per diem has not increased since 2008, he said.

No opposition testimony was offered and the committee took no immediate action on the bill.

Breast pump sales tax exemption proposed

Breast pumps and certain breastfeeding supplies would be exempt from state sales and use tax under a bill heard Jan. 25 by the Revenue Committee.

Introduced by Bellevue Sen. Carol Blood, LB13 would exempt breast pumps purchased for individual home use, breast pump repair and replacement parts, breast pump collection and storage supplies, and nursing pads from the state's 5.5 percent sales and use tax.

A breast pump kit also would qualify for the exemption if the sales price of taxable items of tangible personal property in a kit is 10 percent or less of the kit's total sales price.

Supplies included in the proposed exemption include breast shields, breast pump tubes and valves, backflow protectors, bottles and bottle caps specific to the breast pump, and milk storage bags.

LB13 also would exempt breastfeeding a child from the state's public indecency laws.

The state Department of Revenue estimates that LB13 would decrease state tax revenue by approximately $203,000 in fiscal year 2019-20 and by approximately $302,000 in FY2020-21.

Blood said that reducing the cost of breast pumps and breastfeeding supplies would help support Nebraska mothers. Health professionals and public health officials advocate for breastfeeding because it benefits both babies and mothers, she said.

"We need to be sure that our legislation supports this natural act because it is what is best for Nebraska's newest generation," Blood said.

Dr. Sofia Jawed-Wessel, an associate professor at the School of Health and Kinesiology at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, testified in support of the bill on her own behalf. She said LB13 would make it easier for working mothers to afford the supplies needed to continue breastfeeding after their maternity leave ends.

Jawed-Wessel added that removing breastfeeding from the state's public indecency laws would help mothers overcome another significant barrier—the stigma and lack of social support for breastfeeding. Although no one in the U.S. has been prosecuted for indecent exposure while breastfeeding, she said, most mothers do not know that, and the fear of being cited can keep them from breastfeeding in public.

Also testifying in support was Andi Curry Grubb, state executive director for Planned Parenthood in Nebraska. She said the bill would ensure that a mother can feed her child in a way that is best for both.

Curry Grubb said that after choosing to breastfeed her child she was shocked to learn how expensive high-quality breast pumps and breastfeeding supplies can be.

"I was not able to purchase the most expensive [pump], and I personally believe that that did have an impact on my ability to breastfeed my child for the length of time I wanted to," she said. "Exempting these supplies from sales tax I do believe would have helped in some measure when I was making these decisions.”

Sen. Mark Kolterman

The committee took no immediate action on the bill.

New upper tax bracket, additional taxes on high incomes proposed

The Revenue Committee heard testimony Jan. 23 on a bill that would create a fifth individual state income tax bracket and additional taxes on incomes of more than $1 million.

The state’s highest individual income tax bracket, with a rate of 6.84 percent, applies to taxable income of $29,000 and over for those filing as individuals and $58,000 and over for those who are married filing jointly.

Introduced by Omaha Sen. Tony Vargas, LB50 would change existing brackets and create a new bracket with a rate of 7.84 percent for tax years beginning on or after Jan. 1, 2019. The new bracket would apply to income of $100,000 and over for those who are filing as individuals and $200,000 and over for those who are married filing jointly.

The bill also would impose a 1 percent tax on the portion of a taxpayer’s income that is in excess of $1 million and a 2 percent tax on the portion that is in excess of $2 million.

Vargas said the Legislature needs to raise revenue to avoid further budget cuts and to provide services to an aging, increasingly urban population in the coming decades. He said the state also needs to replenish its cash reserve, which has been cut in half over the past few years.

“A modest increase on our state’s top earners is the most fair and equitable way to get the revenue we need and provide the services and programs that Nebraskans rely on,” he said.

The bill also would require the state tax commissioner to adjust the income tax brackets and additional taxes on high incomes for inflation.

The state Department of Revenue estimates that LB50 would increase state tax revenue by approximately $140 million in fiscal year 2019-20 and by approximately $105 million in FY2020-21.

Renee Fry, executive director of the OpenSky Policy Institute, testified in support of the bill. She said it would reduce taxes on middle-income Nebraskans by expanding the income threshold of the state’s third bracket, which has a rate of 5.01 percent.

Fry said the Legislature could use the revenue raised by LB50 to offset property taxes and pay for other priorities at a time when high-income earners are receiving a tax cut from last year’s federal Tax Cuts and Jobs Act and related changes to the state tax code.

“It’s likely that the impact of the tax increases in LB50 won’t even be noticed by those high-income earners,” she said.

Joey Adler of the Holland Children’s Movement also testified in support. According to a Holland Children’s Institute survey conducted last September, 78 percent of Nebraskans believe the state’s economic policies have helped only the wealthiest Nebraskans, he said.

The same survey found that 58 percent support raising revenue by increasing some taxes and only 37 percent believe the state’s wealthiest residents are paying their fair share or more.

“There is an obvious disconnect that exists between the economic realities of Nebraska families and where they feel their government is focused,” Adler said.

Testifying in opposition to the bill was Sarah Curry, policy director at the Platte Institute. She said the bill would raise taxes on small businesses, many of which pay taxes on their owners’ individual income tax returns.

Raising income tax rates also could cause an exodus of high-income earners to states that have lower or no income taxes, Curry added. Other states have broadened their sales tax bases and eliminated sales tax exemptions to increase revenue instead of raising income tax rates because of that “sticker shock,” she said.

“I don’t disagree that there are some taxes in Nebraska that do need reforming,” Curry said. “I don’t think that imposing a millionaire’s tax is the appropriate course of action if we want to reduce our barriers to economic growth.”

Also testifying in opposition was Ron Sedlacek, speaking on behalf of the Nebraska Chamber of Commerce, the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce and the Nebraska Bankers Association. He said increased income tax rates on high-income earners could discourage highly mobile professionals from locating their businesses in Nebraska.

“People expanding old businesses or creating new ones will incorporate the higher costs of doing business into their decision making and steer clear of the state,” he said.

The committee took no immediate action on the bill.

Sales tax exemption proposed for menstrual hygiene products

The Revenue Committee heard testimony Jan. 25 on a bill that would exempt tampons and other menstrual hygiene products from state sales and use tax.

LB170, introduced by Omaha

Sen. Tony Vargas

Sen. Megan Hunt, would exempt tampons, panty liners, menstrual cups and sanitary napkins from sales and use tax.

Sen. Megan Hunt

Hunt brought an amendment to the hearing intended to clarify that the exemption would apply only to menstrual hygiene products and not feminine hygiene products such as soap or shampoo.

The state Department of Revenue estimates that LB170 would decrease state tax revenue by approximately $1 million in fiscal year 2019-20 and by approximately $1.6 million in FY2020-21.

Hunt said access to menstrual products is limited for vulnerable populations such as the homeless, and health insurance and flexible spending accounts do not cover the cost of those items.

“Menstrual products are indispensable, necessary and vital for the health, well-being and full participation of women and girls in all aspects of society,” she said. “These products are necessities, not luxuries, and I think it’s time our tax code reflected that reality in Nebraska.”

Jen Day of Omaha testified in support of the bill, saying that tampons and pads are essential for women and girls to live their lives with dignity. In the past, she said, she has had to go without tampons because she could not afford them.

“Rushing to the restroom in the middle of the day because you have bled through your pants is not only disruptive but terribly embarrassing,” she said.

Under current law, Day added, Nebraska women and girls have to pay a tax that men do not.

“To categorize menstrual products as a non-necessity is unfairly shifting economic burden in a clearly gendered way,” she said.

Meg Mikolajczyk, deputy director of Planned Parenthood in Nebraska, also testified in support of the bill. She said one recent study found that nearly two-thirds of women were unable to afford menstrual hygiene products during the previous year.

“This issue disproportionately affects low-income people,” Mikolajczyk said. “Tampons and pads cannot be purchased through government assistance programs and are one of the most requested items at shelters and food banks.”

The committee took no immediate action on the bill.

Lawmakers adopt new session rules

After considering several changes, senators adopted their permanent rules Jan. 23. The rules of the Legislature govern the legislative process and are adopted at the beginning of each biennium.

Among the changes brought forth by the Rules Committee was a proposal to give the Legislature’s Planning Committee authority to prioritize one bill per session within its jurisdiction. The rule change was adopted on a 25-17 vote.

The Rules Committee also advanced a proposal that would have formalized the amount of debate required before a cloture motion could be accepted by the presiding officer of the Legislature. A successful cloture motion ceases debate and forces a vote on a bill.

Under the proposal, a cloture motion could be made only after six hours of debate on general file, three hours on select file and one and a half hours on final reading. These time limits reflect the current guidelines used by Speaker Jim Scheer of Norfolk.

Lincoln Sen. Kate Bolz, who brought the proposal to the Rules Committee, urged its adoption.

“Having full and fair debate on this floor [allows] our ‘second house’ to follow the debate, understand and engage in the discussion that we’re having about important policy issues,” Bolz said.

Omaha Sen. Sara Howard spoke in support of the proposal, saying it is important to set a precedent for future legislators to follow once the current speaker is no longer in office.

“I do think future legislatures will look at changes we made in the rules and give them some sort of deference,” she said. “Codifying Speaker Scheer’s common practice would be an appropriate solution for how we’re handling cloture currently.”

Sen. Mike Hilgers of Lincoln opposed the measure. He said continuing to allow the speaker of the Legislature leeway in managing the legislative agenda is necessary.

“We have a limited amount of time in this body and a lot of work to do,” Hilgers said. “We should give discretion to the speaker on how to move things through the body.”

After extensive debate, Bolz withdrew her proposed rule change from consideration.

Finally, senators considered a proposal by North Platte Sen. Mike Groene that would have required public votes for election of the Speaker of the Legislature and chairpersons of all 14 standing committees.

Currently, these votes are conducted by secret ballot.

Groene said voters expect transparency from their representatives on all matters.

“You should be proud of who you vote for,” he said. “You should not only be able to defend it with your colleagues, but your constituents.”

Sen. Steve Lathrop of Omaha opposed the change. He said there is no compelling reason to change the process for electing legislative leadership.

“I look at the rules as the collective wisdom of the people who have served in this institution before us,” Lathrop said. “This system of choosing chairmen by secret ballot has worked for this institution for decades.”

The Groene proposal was defeated on a 22-25 vote. Following adoption of an additional technical change, the rules were adopted 36-9.

TRANSPORTATION & TELECOMMUNICATIONS

More flexibility proposed for roads projects

Members of the Transportation and Telecommunications Committee heard testimony Jan. 22 on a bill that would allow the Nebraska Department of Transportation to complete roads projects more efficiently.

Under LB82, introduced by Henderson Sen. Curt Friesen, NDOT could apply for pre-approval to use practical road design standards that might not meet all current statutory design standards, but that would provide significant benefits to users at a reasonable cost.

NDOT Director Kyle Schneweis

spoke in support of the bill, saying there already is a system in place to apply for a one-time, project-specific relaxation of standards from the Nebraska Board of Public Roads Classifications and Standards (NBCS).

The bill would allow the department, counties or municipalities to apply for programmatic pre-approvals, he said, which could apply to an entire category of roads projects that are materially similar.

“Practical design provides the Department of Transportation’s professional engineers the flexibility to safely and efficiently modernize our transportation system to best serve Nebraskans,” Schneweis said.

Roger Figard, NBCS chairman, also testified in support of LB82. He said it would not reduce or eliminate NDOT’s responsibility to meet statutory requirements.

“This continues and supports the major updates and changes the board has incorporated over the last 10 years,” Figard said. “Updating design standards would allow our dollars at the city and county levels to go much farther.”

The bill also would allow each county and municipality to electronically certify completion of one-year and six-year road improvement plans required annually by state law, rather than submitting hard copies of both plans to NBCS.

The certification must be included in the county or municipality’s public record and be adopted by its governing board.

No one testified in opposition to LB82. The committee voted 8-0 to advance the bill to general file.

URBAN AFFAIRS

Bill would mandate rental inspections

Rental properties in Omaha and Lincoln would be inspected regularly under a bill considered Jan. 22 by the Urban Affairs Committee.

Omaha Sen. Justin Wayne introduced LB85, which would require that most residential rental properties in metropolitan and primary class cities be registered with the city and inspected at least every three years. Omaha is the state’s only metropolitan class city and Lincoln is the only primary class city.

Sen. Justin Wayne

Properties owned or inspected by a housing agency would be exempt. Cities would be allowed to charge landlords a fee to cover the cost of the inspections, and levy fines on buildings that are not complying with local building codes. Unpaid fees and fines would become a lien on the applicable property.

Wayne said LaVista and South Sioux City have similar programs, while the state of Iowa requires regular inspections of rental properties in cities of at least 15,000.

Wayne said he introduced the bill after roughly 500 immigrants living at the Yale Park apartment complex in north Omaha were forced to evacuate last fall because of gas leaks, unsafe electrical circuits and rat and insect infestations.

Substandard housing is a common worry among the residents of north Omaha, Wayne said, some of whom are afraid to raise complaints. The bill is necessary, he said, because landlords have failed to self-regulate.

“We have regulations on all types of things that get passed on and we do it in the name of health, safety and what we deem Nebraska values,” Wayne said. “That’s all this bill’s trying to do.”

Constance Jones testified in support of the bill, saying it would prevent situations like the one she experienced after renting an apartment in north Omaha last October. Jones said that her apartment had uneven stairs, no heating on the second floor and was infested with cockroaches. The city conducted an inspection at her request that revealed 29 code violations, she said. A month after the inspection, Jones said her landlord terminated her lease.

“Please help me to understand how that’s not retaliation?” Jones said.

Paw Htoo, who has served as an advocate and interpreter for the refugees from Myanmar who lived in Yale Park, said many residents there felt as if they were living in another refugee camp. Htoo said the most harrowing story she heard was of a man who awoke in the night when the ceiling of his apartment collapsed on him.

Htoo added that many resident felt ignored or taken advantage of because of the language barrier.

Kennetta Wainwright, who rents an apartment in Omaha, spoke in opposition to the bill, which she said would raise rents for all tenants.

“These charges will be passed on to the renter,” Wainwright said. “If you do this, you’re going to have tent cities.”

Lynn Fisher, a landlord in Lincoln, also spoke against the bill. He said he had sympathy for those who have lived in substandard housing, but said the law should target negligent landlords rather than burdening all property owners.

“The challenge with the government trying to solve the problem is that is always costs more,” Fisher said.

Omaha Planning Director David Fanslau said the city is working to improve housing enforcement. Fanslau questioned the need for LB85, which he said could cost Omaha up to $4 million per year to implement.

The committee took no immediate action on the bill.
